

Customer Testimonial

To Whom It May Concern,

ChemStation has been our sanitation company for several years now. The products and the service is second to none, but the best of the best are the people at ChemStation. They are extremely competent and reliable. Our Service Tech is on call for us 24/7. He attends our Food Safety conference calls and attended our Friday food safety management meetings since the beginning of our service. The people at ChemStation will do whatever is asked of them to help us in any situation. If they don't have the answer to an issue, they will search to find it. If we need service at our plant, they come right away. Our Tech monitors our chemical levels and will deliver them himself if needed. I trust ChemStation to always do the right thing to the best of their ability. With the continuous pressure of food safety that we face every day, I am thankful to have the ChemStation folks in this facility helping us with our cleaning and sanitizing programs.

Best Regards,

Pictograms and Hazards

How well do you know the Hazard Communication Standard pictograms?

These pictograms are required on labels to alert users of the chemical hazards to which they may be exposed. Each pictogram represents a distinct hazard(s), and the pictogram on the label is determined by the chemical hazard classification.

Do you know what the flame represents?

Do you know the hazard statements associated with the exclamation mark pictogram?

If not, check out the OSHA Quick Card on Hazard Communication Standard Pictogram:
